Abstract:

The purpose of the article is to present codification of private international law in Argentina. The introductory remarks contain an overview of international private law codification in Latin American countries. Then the Civil Code of Argentina from 1869 with an outline of its international private law regulations is described. Subsequently regional and international trends in codification of private international law are presented. The international conventions and treaties signed by Argentina are enumerated. Next there is an overview of draft laws containing regulation of private international law in Argentina (1974-2003). These observations are followed by general description of the Argentinean Civil and Commercial Code from 2014. The analysis of its selected international private law regulations is conducted. The article includes comparative remarks.
